Dear Ms. Heagney,

Here is the promised family photo, along with the photo mentioned in Amari Meader's notes. Please note that here again there is (yet another) absurdly egregious misquotation in these notes: "This is 'my truest self'" is hardly a correct rendering of "This is the real me!". Here I'm being shoehorned into the BPD/MPD "confused self-image" category, even as I'm trying to make it plain that I'm perfectly clear and stable in my gender identity, the natural expression of which I have to manage carefully in order to be "socially acceptable" and avoid, e.g., murder at the hands of misdirected "fag-bashers".

And to repeat a point which challenges a widely held and deep-seated sexist bias, I'm not wearing "womens' clothes" in this photo, I'm wearing MY clothes.

Thanks again for your efforts to make some sense of all this stuff,

Sincerely,

Kevin Eric Saunders a/k/a bonze blayk

PS: As for the "high heels" worn by the aging "shit-kicker" I drew for Dr. Povinelli, if and when you encounter a person of this sort, you'd be better off not referring to his cowboy boots as "high heels". Once again, ideology overrides perception, and the frame overwhelms the picture: as one of the MedScape articles I recently read on the neurological bases of cognition put it in the title, "Believing is Seeing"... unfinished willow trees are all dead, and unfinished homes in the Bauhaus style are simply bizarre (many many leaves on the tree, and the swimming pool adjoining the house, are missing along with other details because I wasn't allowed to complete the drawings to my own satisfaction--reminiscent of my "confession", where I allowed the trooper to cut short my attempts to fix his botched rendition of my statements because "we're in a hurry"). Fooey.... you should note that Povinelli finds my renderings of the Bender-Gestalt figures "extremely well reproduced," yet another indicator of left temporal lobe epilepsy and concomitant obsessive attention to detail.

PPS: Here also is a Xerox with my property and some photos of my house on the back. Being physically isolated from the neighbors is very nice, but not when you can barely walk (as was the case for me during most of January), and especially not when you're having an acute attack of paranoia and you've been deprived of the means of self-defense (as was the case for me on 2/6/97), when recent experience has established that it takes over 20 minutes for the sheriffs to respond to an "emergency" (12/29/96).

Home Features

UNIQUE HOME WITH DIVERSE POTENTIAL!

1668 Trumansburg Road - Offered at $149,000.

Privacy and seclusion on forty two acres, yet only ten minutes to downtown Ithaca are the beginning of this home's appeal! The home, added in 1980 to a 31'x150' barn, has over 3600 finished square feet. COMMERCIAL FRONTAGE on Trumansburg Road and frontage on Van Dorn Corners Road add challenges for the imagination as to all the possibilities. Four great outbuildings and two ponds complete the picture!

THE HOME

FIRST FLOOR A spacious 30'x30' combination kitchen, dining room, and living room overlooks the first pond. Naturally finished red oak flooring, together with a large and open kitchen, enhance the character. An office and a dark room adjoin the living room. A full bath is adjacent to the kitchen.

SECOND FLOOR Four bedrooms, two full baths, more red oak floors, and two 30'x30' studios highlight this area.

OUTSIDE Two 30'x80' three story barns with electric and water, a four car garage, an office/ pumphouse, and a one acre pond enrich the land.
